NATHAN

FITZGERALD

AGM Construction Supplies believes that it has a responsibility to engage and encourage working relationships with the 3,500 companies designated under the Victorian “social enterprise” statutes.

CASE STUDY

CHISHOLM ROAD PRISON PROJECT

The John Holland company completed the Chisholm Road Prison in Lara, Victoria, which cost over a half-billion dollars. This new, maximum-security prison will house over 1,200 inmates.

The final complex includes eight prisoner communities, each with 78-bed units and the overall facility is five times larger than the Melbourne Cricket Ground.

The company wanted 90% of the materials to be Australian made. It also wanted to employ local workers and persons identified in the “social enterprise” statutes as defined by the State of Victoria.

PROJECT STATS AT A GLANCE

86,000

kilograms of grout delivered by AGM (made in Wyong, NSW)

31,000

Plastic panel shims (made in Victoria)

5,000

Threaded steel dowel bars (which were manufactured in Dandenong, Victoria)

PAIN POINTS

- ✗ John Holland wanted Australian-made materials for the project
- ✗ They wanted to employ local contractors
- ✗ They wanted to engage the “social enterprise” to elements of the Victorian government social procurement framework

THE RESULTS

AGM brought important supplies to the site. It also located an Australian metal fabricator who milled the steel dowl bars for the prison complex.

AGM Construction Supplies also located several “social enterprise” contract partners including a local construction group operated by Australian military veterans. We also encouraged John Holland to work with Geelong Disability People, a local assembly line company staffed by people with disabilities.

CORPORATE AND SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

AGM Construction Supplies drafted its own “Corporate Social Responsibility” action plan knowing that it could help lead Victorian businesses build a more-inclusive future.

As defined by the state government, Victorian businesses are encouraged to work with persons with disabilities, women-owned and Indigenous-owned businesses and veterans in transition.

- ✓ Facilitate awareness of Indigenous culture
- ✓ Embraces and adheres to Victorian government social procurement policies
- ✓ Engaging with local Disability Networks
- ✓ Engage with Veterans in Construction
- ✓ Engage with Women in Construction
- ✓ Institute a waste-watchers’ program

AGM Construction Supplies also has an “environmental policy” designed to foster an important sense of care for the environment. We believe all corporate citizens have a responsibility to protect the environment.

We also believe that AGM has a responsibility to encourage working relationships with local and regional manufacturing enterprises. When possible, we want to use Australian-made products and services.
